There was a time
when Petrobras was
only an oil company.

As one of the world's leading energy companies, Petrobras is highly committed to its increasing quest for renewable sources. The company is investing heavily in solar energy, wind power and biodiesel – a biofuel that will soon be in use in Brazil. Operating in twelve countries, Petrobras is also allocating funds to the development of other energy sources, such as a hydro-power plant in Argentina. Energy that benefits society while protecting the environment: this is the massive challenge faced by Petrobras – and one of its greatest responsibilities.
